REV. LELAND A. EDWARDS

There are times in life when the shadows of grief fall so suddenly and so heavily as to make it impossible for us to penetrate the gloom sufficiently to be fully conscious of the greatness of the loss which brings the sorrow. Such was the case on Saturday afternoon, June 2, when word was passed along from one to another of the hundreds of friends of Rev. L. A. Edwards that this beloved man, pastor to many and friend to a multitude, had been called to eternal rest.

Mr. Edwards was enjoying the noon luncheon at the District Convention of the Lions Club at Poland Spring when he suddenly sank back in his chair and, almost instantly, those near him saw that the end had come. He had just seated himself after singing in a quartet and was about to conduct the Memorial Service for the Lions who had answered the final summons.

Rev. Leland A. Edwards was born on a farm in Springfield, Vermont, June 8, 1865. He attended the Academy at Bellows Falls, Vermont, where he worked and lived with Lawyer Bridgman. On completing his course he went to Sherbrooke, Quebec, and entered the scythe snath business conducted by his brother-in-law and cousin. Later he was employed in stores of Sherbrooke and Montreal, having charge of the carpet and household departments. Then he re-entered the scythe snath business.

In 1899 he married Miss Bertha A. Gordon of Sherbrooke, Canada. They had two sons, Harry L., whose death recently took place in Baltimore, Maryland, and Willis B., who is a resident of Darton, Vermont. Mr. Edwards had often thought that he would like to be a minister, and at the age of 36, leaving his wife and two small sons at Franklin Center, Quebec, he took up his studies at the Congregational College of Montreal. Here again he worked in a store to defray the expenses of his education.

Alumni Luncheon
At one o'clock the annual luncheon and business meeting of the alumni association was held in the spacious dining hall of the Marian True Gehring Students' Home, with Agnes B. Twaddle presiding. The following officers were elected for 1935: President, Agnes B. Twaddle; Vice President, Alton Bartlett; Secretary, Maxine Clough; Treasurer, Carrie Wright; Executive Committee, Doris Lord, Chairman; Dorothy Hanson, Betty Anderson, Herbert Bean, Fred Merrill, Floyd Mason and Dorothy Tucker. A telegram of greetings was received from Mrs. Marion True Gehring, Mr. William Bingham and Dr. George Farnsworth, following the reading of which the secretary was instructed to send a telegram of good wishes to these three friends of the school. Following the business meeting, Principal Frank E. Hanson spoke of Mrs. Gehring as a most consistent and persistent supporter of the school, and concluded his remarks by asking Mrs. Hanson to unveil the new portrait of Mrs. Gehring which Mr. Bingham had recently presented to the school. As the beautiful portrait, painted by Henry Salem Hubbell, was unveiled, a hush of intense emotion swept over the audience and then gave way to appreciative applause. Seated at the head table were the trustees and honored guests of the school. The meeting concluded with the singing of Gould songs.

Dedicatory Exercises
The dedicatory exercises were held in the William Bingham Gymnasium hereafter at 2:30 p. m., Mr. Elbert C. Pack presiding. In the presentation address, Principal Frank E. Hanson compared the old and new Gould, sketching the brief career of his outstanding progress. He spoke fervently of outstanding leaders of Gould's history, such as the Hon. A. E. Herick, Hon. L. B. Holden, William J. Farnsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Pratt, Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Gehring, William Bingham and, and numerous others who have been important factors in the development of this institution. Mr. H. J. Carlson, Sr., of the firm of Coolidge & Carlson, Architects, presented the keys to the new Academy building to Hon. H. H. Hastings, Judge Hastings, in his acceptance address, mentioned the rise of Gould Academy to its present status, and stressed the outstanding accomplishment of its Principal, Hanson, who came here as a young man and who has developed the school and its curriculum until it is outstanding in New England. The orchestra and combined glee clubs rendered in a very pleasing manner the Dedication March, the music of which was written by Anton Eugene Mainente and the words by Miss Margaret E. Hanscom.

Dr. Bertram E. Packard, State Commissioner of Education, spoke of the history of Bethel, the development of academies, the change in their curriculum, and of their importance to the youth of today and to the citizens of tomorrow. He complimented Dr. Hanson on the fine institution and reminded the people of Bethel and vicinity that they should be proud of the many advantages which Gould has to offer to their children. The outstanding event in the dedication program was probably the unveiling of the portrait of Dr. Gehring. This portrait was painted by Henry Salem Hubbell, an artist of world renown and presented to the school by William Bingham and. Plans had been made to have artist Hubbell here at the dedication exercises, and Principal Frank E. Hanson, regretting his regret that this was not possible, called upon Mr. Elbert C. Pack to unveil the beautiful picture of one of Gould's most loyal benefactors. Seated on the stage during the program were: Principal F. E. Hanson, Mr. Elbert C. Pack, Hon. H. H. Hastings, Dr. Bertram E. Packard, Rev. P. J. Clifford, H. J. Carlson, Sr., Mr. M. C. White, F. B. Merrill, Dr. B. L. Bryant, Hon. Eben S. Kilborn, Dr. H. Tibbels, Mr. Ernest Walker, Mr. Leon V. Walker, Dr. J. H. Pratt, and H. J. Carlson, Jr.

Both Principal Hanson and Mr. Carlson emphasized the fact that to Dr. George Farnsworth goes most of the credit for Gould's having its new academy building this year.

The program for the Dedicatory Exercises follows:

The reception and commencement hall was held in the William Bingham Gymnasium in the evening with music furnished by a Bates College orchestra. The guests were received by Principal and Mrs. Hanson, Hon. Eben S. Kilborn, President of the Board of Trustees and Mrs. Kilborn, and Miss Ella K. Litchfield. The walls of the gymnasium were decorated with class banners and streamers of green and gold, class colors of the graduates.

GREENWOOD CENTER

The Greenwood Center school closed Friday, June 8. The pupils with their teacher, Miss Morgan, and some of the parents and friends enjoyed a picnic at Songo Pond.

DEDICATION HYMN MARGARET E. HANSCOM, '22

Dear Gould, your name we praise,
Your spirit honor now,
You, whose traditions through the years
Our hearts and minds endow.
More than of brick and stone,
Has your facade been made:
Of more enduring fabric, too,
Is your foundation laid.

Ideals a century old
A part of you have grown.
Integrity and character
Have laid your corner stone.
Dear Gould, we humbly pledge
Our loyalty anew,
And may the influence of our faith
Live through the years in you.

CLASS ODE Tune: Auld Lang Syne

Our days at Gould are ended now—
Those days we've loved so well.
We each must seek our different paths
Our fates no one can tell.
And yet though we may wander far Away from comrades dear,
Dear Gould, we'll cherish every thought
Of days that we've spent here.

Now as we stand together here,
It saddens every heart,
To think that we may meet no more,
When from G. A. we part;
But friendship's chain will never break,
Though we must bid adieu—
To classmates, friends, and teachers dear
And dear Old Gold and Blue.

As on life's journey forth we fare,
We'll strive for victory,
We'll never fear to do or dare,
Gould, we'll be true to thee.
And this will be our guiding star:
"To thine own self be true,"
And cherished memories will be ours—
Of dear old Gold and Blue.

The best way for a shade tree to get commercial fertilizer in a short time is to drop the chemical in holes made by a crow bar. The holes should be out under the branches and not close around the tree. Small trees should receive not more than two pounds of nitrate of soda. Larger trees, say 18 inches in diameter, should receive about eight or nine pounds.

Thirty-one per cent of the students in agriculture and home economics in the agricultural colleges of the 13 central states are former 4-H club members. There are more than three times as many as there were six years ago.

BEST PRINTING PROSPECT
EIGHTH GRADER

The following item about Billie Morrill, a grandson of Mrs. Nellie Seabury, will be of interest to many of our readers in West Bethel and vicinity.

Billie Morrill, who entered the high school last September in the most promising prospect in printing this year according to Mr. Miller, head of the printing department.

"Billie prepares his lessons, not just to get a grade. He takes a genuine interest in each exercise,
and does it in several different ways
before he leaves it. I have not seen him better. He has a wonderful understanding of printing problems,"
Mr. Miller declared.

According to Mr. Miller, Billie will finish his year's work by midterm, something that has never been done before in this school.
Although some students in the past have put in as many as fifty extra hours, none of them have been able to complete the first unit until about before the year's term was out. Billie has put no more than twenty hours extra during the past four months. Yet he has almost completed a whole year's work
and has made straight "A" grades.

Mr. Miller declined to predict for Billie such success as Martin Tucker has achieved, because Billie has done only the first year's work. He explained that some first year students fall down on the second year because it is rather uninteresting. But if Billie works through his second year with as much enthusiasm as he has shown in the first, he should make an extraordinary printer.

Billie is one of three wards of Yonah Lodge No. 662 who are now at the home and it will no doubt be a source of gratification to the members of this lodge to know of the splendid progress he is making.

One can readily see that those earlier years formed a splendid foundation for the profession which he later followed, for there he learned to know and understand men of all types and classes, making it possible for him to better understand and minister to their needs.

His first pastorate was in Winthrop and Brasier Falls, N. Y., in 1892. Later he served the churches of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, Cleveland, Ohio, Newport, Vt., and St.
Lawrence Church, Portland, Maine.
His pastorate at Newport, covering a period of 11 years, was marked by a high degree of success, and his last year was the best of his long pastorate there, which he left to accept a call to the St. Lawrence Church of Portland. Here he remained till his health demanded that he give up the ever-increasing duties of this large church, and seven years ago he came to the Bethel Congregational Church.

Mr. Edwards' religious work has not been confined to his local parishes but he has been influential in County and State organizations.
At the time of his death he was President of the Maine Council of Religious Education, an organization for which he worked most zealously. Through his efforts and influence a debt of long standing was recently lifted. He has served as Director of the Maine Conference of Congregational-Christian Churches. For several years he had been Secretary of the Eastern Division of the National Organization of the Comrades of the Way.

A preacher, inspired and inspiring, a pastor sympathizing and cheering, a leader enthusiastic and forceful, a citizen staunch and true, and a friend devoted and loyal, the loss of our beloved "Parson Edwards" carries us beyond the region of grief and even denies us the relief of tears. We may see God in the field and forest and in all the beauties of the earth, but we can get no clearer vision of Him
than is portrayed in this life dedicated to His service.

Mingled with our sorrow there must prevail a feeling of pride and exaltation that the people of Bethel and vicinity have been privileged to share in the service which he has rendered as an able servant
of God. Blessed indeed are the young people of those communities in which Mr. Edwards lived and worked. He loved boys and girls and they loved him. Many times he has been heard to say that were it not for the enthusiasm and loyalty of his young people, his work as a minister would be very discouraging. The Comrades of the Way, organized and directed by him, has played a vital part in the development of the youth of the community, and the young people will ever honor the memory of him who was to them a true comrade.

There are many characteristics which seem to predominate as we dwelt upon the memory of Mr. Edwards: his eloquent, original and impressive sermons, his rare musical talent of which he gave so generously, his willingness to cooperate—yes rather to lead in every activity which tended toward the betterment of humanity. The Red Cross, the Lions Club, the American Legion, the Parent Teacher Association, the Boy Scouts, as well as the different organizations of his church were strengthened by his efforts. Wherever he was found, there he was contributing to the enjoyment and enrichment of those about him, and in the midst of such activities he was taken from us. Perhaps his outstanding characteristic was that all pervading cheerfulness which radiated from his life even when repeated personal sorrows were such as to overpower the optimism and faith of most men. In this resolution drawn up by the Portland Lions Club are found these words: "Such storms of life as he encountered, he met face on, with fortitude and unbowed head; he ever marched onward and upward with full faith

in God's goodness."

Let us not forget that we owe it to ourselves to remember that where such men as Mr. Edwards walk, footprints are left that we can proudly follow.

The beautiful and impressive
funeral service, directed by Dr. S.
S. Greenleaf, was held in the church so recently served by him amid a profusion of flowers such as has seldom, if ever, been seen on a like occasion in Bethel. Silent messages were they testifying to the love and esteem for him who has left us,
and conveying comfort and sympathy to those so suddenly bereft.

The church was filled, not alone
by those who had known Mr. Edwards best, but by men, women and children who through frequent or casual meetings had learned to love and reverence him whom they knew to be their friend. The Comrades of the Way, The Sunday School, The Boy Scouts, The Girl
Scouts, the Junior Class of Gould
Academy of which his granddaughter,
Miss Betty Edwards, is a member, and a large group of school children attended the service in a body. Their expression of love and loyalty can but make us realize how much a good life counts in the life of boys and girls.

The service was conducted by Rev. Roscoe S. Colby, Vice-President of the Congregational-Christian Conference of Maine, assisted by Rev. Wilbur I. Ball of the Oxford County Larger Parish. Both these men were brother ministers with whom Mr. Edwards had been intimately associated.

A few excerpts from the words of tribute spoken by Rev. Colby will find an echo in the hearts of those who read them.

"My friends, we are not here to eulogize this man, our friend.
Eulogy is unnecessary. This life has not been lived in a corner, but openly so that all the world could see, and it has spoken more elo-quently than any words of ours can possibly speak. . . . Yet so great is our love for him, so great do we admire him, that a few sincere words of appreciation must be spoken. . . .

"Whatever he did, he did with all his might. Like his Master, he saved himself not at all. . . .
Were he preaching, singing, at a Church Conference, at the Lions Club, on the golf course, at play,
he entered heart and soul into it.
He never grew old because he never lost his enthusiasm. . . .

"As a preacher he was at his best. He had a pulpit presence—with that refined face, that shock of white hair, that deep clear voice—
which led the people to call him lovingly "Saint John." He commanded attention and he always had a message, well prepared, well worth hearing, well worth heeding. . . .

"In all his ministry he has been a 'man's man.' . . . He drew men to him by the power of his personality and held them by the contagion of his boundless spirit."

Rev. Colby in his concluding remarks referred to Mr. Edwards' remarkable friendliness and said that he could say nothing better than what Sam Walter Foss has said in his poem, "The House by the Side of the Road," which he read. Mr.
Edwards kept this poem in a conspicuous place in his study.
"Thus," Rev. Colby said, "it was both his inspiration and his likeness."

The pall bearers were six brother
clergymen of nearby towns,
several of whom are young men who had learned to value their "older brother" for his wise counsel and Christian fellowship. The following are the names of the bearers:
Rev. William Sinclair of Gorham, N. H., Rev. M. M. Deems of Norway, Rev. R. S. Irons of the Um-bagog Larger Parish, Rev. Ralph Brandon of the Oxford County Larger Parish, Mr. Warner Palmer
of Rumford Point and Mr. Donald Bond of Oxford County Larger Parish.

Following the service the remains were taken to Newport, Vermont, for interment. Here services were held in the church formerly served by him. Here, too, an abundance of flowers spoke elo-quently of the love of his friends of earlier years. The service was conducted by Rev. F. A. Myer, pastor of the church, and Rev. E. Leroy Rice of Barre, Vermont, who was an old and close friend of Mr. Edwards.

To the beloved companion and to all those nearest and dearest
our hearts go out in deepest sympathy. Unwilling to trespass upon the privileged privacy of a grief-stricken home, innumerable friends share in silent thought and prayer
the sadness of the hour.

The writer has been requested by Mrs. Edwards and other members of the family to convey through the columns of the Citizen their sincere and grateful appreciation for the immeasurable kind and generous expressions of sympathy which they have received from their Bethel friends. The writer is here led to say, "His works do follow him," for was he not our example in being first to offer his assistance and sympathy in times of trouble?

The following lines which he kept on his desk might well be the text of which his life was the sermon.

FRIENDSHIP'S ROAD
Friendship is a chain of gold
Shaped in God's all perfect mold,
Each link a smile, a laugh, a tear,
A grip of the hand, a word of cheer.

As steadfast as the ages roll
Binding closer soul to soul;
No matter how far, or heavy the load—
Sweet is the journey on Friend-ship's road. J. B. Downie

LET ME WALK WITH THE MEN
IN THE ROAD

"It's only a half truth the poet has sung
Of the "House by the side of the way."
Our Master had neither a house
nor a home,
But he walked with the crowd
day by day.
And I think, when I read of the poet's desire,
That a house by the road would
be good;
But service a found in its tender-
ent form
When we walk with the crowd
in the road.

So I say let me walk with the men
in the road,
Let me seek out the burdens that
crush,

Let me speak a kind word of cheer to the weak
Who are falling behind in rush.

There are wounds to be healed there are breaks we must mend
There's a cup of cold water
give,
And the man in the road by the side of his friend
Is the man who has learned to live.

Then tell me no more of the hope
by the road,
There is only one place I live.

It's there with the men who toll along,
Who are needing the cheer
can give,
It is pleasant to live in the hope
by the way
And be a friend, as the poet
said;
But the Master is bidding us, "Eye your load,
For your rest waiteth you
ahead."

I cannot remain in the house
by the road,
And watch as the tollers go,
Their faces beclouded with
and with sin,
So burdened, their strength
ly gone.
I'll go to their side, I'll speak
good cheer,
I'll help them to carry their
And I'll smile at the man in house by the way,
As I walk with the crowd in road.

Out there in the road that goes
the house,
Where the poet is singing
song,
I'll walk and I'll work midst
heat of the day,
And I'll help falling brother
along—
Too busy to live in the house
the way,
Too happy for such an abode,
And my heart sings its praise
the Master of all,
Who is helping me serve in road. —Walter J. Gresh

The greatest of authorities favor and endorse the use of PYROIL for better motor performance. Ask for the facts.

If your car has its original oil? Overheating on long runs? Then, a pleasant revelation is in store, the best time you use PYROIL.

PYROIL withstands the withering heat of the motor head where ordinary oil burns into carbon. Supplies constant lubrication to valves, stems, guides, pistons, cylinder walls, that no motor heat can affect. Presses sticky valves. Seals rings. Banishes hard carbon. Makes your motor better every mile you ride.

Drive into your filling station or garage and ask more about PYROIL. Ask for a free copy of the amazing "Story of Pyroil." Most Favored and Guaranteed by PYROIL CO. LA CROSSE, WIS., U. S. A.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

June 10—A most comfortable day to rest. Warm and pleasant—the sun's rays tempered by low hanging vapor clouds.

The hard shower of June 6th passed over this place, but not without leaving some trace of damage in its wake. Many light fixtures and power pumps were put out of commission. At the Andrews bungalow rooms occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Andrews were damaged considerably. A screen door was shattered and casings splintered, the door still torn out and the steel ceiling torn down near the door. Mrs. Andrews and others settling in the screened piazza received slight shocks. A set of buildings owned by Fred Dunham, unoccupied, a short distance from where he lives, known as the old Whitman place were struck and burned to the ground. If I am not mistaken this was the birthplace of Jacob Whitman, Jr.

The Andrews of South Woodstock were most happily surprised on Tuesday, June 5, to receive a call from Herbert Andrews of California. "Bert," as he was known, was formerly in business with Judson Curtis, now deceased, in a clothing store in West Paris. Leaving there forty years ago he settled in the West and went into business there, where he has been most successful.

Mrs. Mary Felt had the misfortune to fall down the cellar stairs June 8, a stair board having loosened for the want of a nail caused the mishap, causing many bruises and much pain. A wonder the accident had not been worse.

A party of young people friends of the Felt boys, Lester and Linwood, took a mountain climb Sunday afternoon, up the old pathway, by the land-slide, to the top of Perham Mountain, where after viewing the surrounding countryside, all enjoyed a most delightful six o'clock picnic dinner. Coming home later, Perham Pond, a miniature lake containing the waters of the fountain of youth, was visited. Another day to be remembered.

Thursday, June 7, was picnic day for Union School children at beautiful Songo Pond. Arriving there in evidence and promptly on the stroke of 12 o'clock every knife, fork and spoon was busy. Following a rest period for all there came games, stunts and bathing. All aboard for home, stopping for a marshmallow and wienie roast by Pennesseewassee Lake at six o'clock.

Today, June 10, marks a day of great preparation among our noble tribal band known as the Braves of Molly Ockett. For a long time the Braves have planned to pay homage to the resting place of Molly Ockett in Andover. An American Indian of great courage said to have served in Civil War time as a messenger of trust whose honor was never doubted. A trail, over which she marked her pathway through the forest, followed the high peaks of mountains from the Canadian border to the harbor of Portland. Molly Ockett, one of these mountains, and sacred to her memory, is situated here in South Woodstock. It is here the Braves of Molly Ockett have waged fierce battle, have conquered in many a conflict. Today as I witness the pilgrimage mo thinks what more fitting tribute than a tribal battle perchance, with fierce warriors of the place where Molly Ockett sleeps. Will Chief Big Gun today harangue his warriors and should an enemy attack will they again

Who will not say after reading this item that "What is one man's loss is another man's gain"? George Davis of this place has for some time been interested in bee culture and as a pleasing pastime had spent many hours working among his bees. Expecting them to swarm very soon, what was his consternation on arriving home from his work Tuesday night, June 5th, to find his bees had swarmed and gone somewhere. Ahner Benson, living two miles away, had been informed by Frank Davis, living only a short distance from the home of George Davis, that a swarm of bees had taken up their abode in one of his chimneys and that if he would come and get them he was welcome to them. Mr. Benson was delighted and came right down from Perkins Valley, smoked out the bees and secured the prize, taking them to his home. Of course the bees bore no earmarks and therefore could not be identified as the property of George Davis, but one can form an opinion as to the rightful owner or where they came from to Frank Davis' chimney.

A Peck of Oysters Per Capita Annual Harvest

The taking of oysters from American coastal waters constitutes the most valuable fishery of the United States and one of the greatest of the world. About 30,000,000 bushels are harvested in a year in this country or about a peck for every person. About 90 per cent of these are procured on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts, says the Detroit News.

A single female oyster produces 10,000,000 eggs in one spawning. Most of the oyster eggs are never fertilized and are therefore lost. Many of those that are fertilized are eaten by larger creatures or never find a place to settle and are swept out to sea or smothered in mud or sand on the ocean bottom.

The rate of growth of the oyster varies widely and depends on the temperature and food content of the water, and the time of its birth. In Long Island sound it takes an oyster about four years to grow four or five inches long, but in southern waters it grows to eight or ten inches or even more. When crowded together oysters assume abnormal shapes such as the "coon oysters" of the South, and eventually the mass becomes so dense that preceding generations are smothered.

The only method of increasing the oyster supply in the United States that has been at all successful is that of catching the young free-swimming oysters at the time when they are just ready to "set" and then transplanting them where they will develop best.

THURSTON POPULAR IN PRIMARY CONTEST

Although Bethel people are apt to be optimistic regarding the standing of Paul C. Thurston in the run for the candidacy of United States Senator which will be decided in the primaries Monday, it is encouraging to note the opinions of men in both parties who have the opportunity to learn first hand of the feeling in other sections of the State. There seems to be a growing appreciation of his abilities and possibilities which is indeed pleasing to those of his home town, and there are many who predict almost certain success for him in the fall if he is victorious in the primary election.

Walter I. Mascott, shoe manufacturer of Mechanic Falls, was fined $100 in the District Court at Bangor Tuesday on the charge of permitting an employe to work more than 40 hours in one week.

Fireworks Thrill World's Fair Crowds

WITH THE POETS

To Our Readers—If there is an old song or poem which you cannot find and would like to see in print, write the Citizen. If we are unable to locate it possibly another reader can furnish it for publication.

THE MAN WHO WINS

The man who wins is an average man. Not built on any particular plan, Not blest with any particular luck; Just steady and earnest and full of pluck.

When asked a question he does not "guess"—

He knows, and answers "No" or "Yes;"

When set a task that the rest can't do, He buckles down till he's put it through.

Three things he learned; That the man who tries Finds favor in his employer's eyes;

That it pays to know more than one thing well; That it doesn't pay all he knows to tell.

For the man who wins is the man who works, Who neither labor nor trouble shirks, Who uses his hands, his head, his eyes;

The man who wins is the man who tries.

IF YOU DON'T LIKE THE TOWN (American Lumberman)

If you don't like the kind of town That this town seems to be, If buildings here are tumbled down A way you hate to see,

If something isn't up-to-date, Or good as things of old, While other towns are simply great (Or so you have been told);

If you would like to see a place That's full of push and snap, A town that hits a faster pace, A town that's on the map;

Yes, if a way you'd like to know To find it in a jerk, I'll tell you where you ought to go— You ought to go to work.

You needn't pack a trunk or grip And leave the folks behind, You needn't go and take a trip, Some other place to find, You needn't go and settle down Where friends of old you miss— For, if you want that kind of town, Just make it out of this.

DO IT NOW

Nixon Waterman in Success

If you've found a task worth doing, Do it now. In delay there's danger brewing, Do it now. Don't you be a by-an-byer And a sluggish patience tryer; If there's aught you would acquire, Do it now.

If you'd earn a prize worth owning, Do it now. Drop all waiting and postponing, Do it now. Say, "I will!" and then stick to it, Choose your purpose and pursue it, There's but one right way to do it, Do it now.

All we have is just this minute, Do it now. Find your duty and begin it, Do it now. Surely you're not always going To be a "going-to-be," and knowing, You must sometime make a showing, Do it now.

Sound Travels Through Rock

Sound travels much faster through solid rock than through still air. In several tests by the Harvard seismograph station, it was found that earthquake waves set up by exploding dynamite run through granite at nearly 17,000 feet a second and through an ancient igneous rock at more than 20,000 feet a second. This is high speed compared with approximately 1,100 feet a second, the velocity of sound in still air. Earthquake detecting instruments were used in the tests. Popular Science Magazine.

RECORD CROWD SEES NEW FAIR

Street of Villages Gets Big Play; Lights All New.

Chicago.—More than 235,000 persons saw the new World's Fair here on its first week-end. A record opening day crowd of 154,003 Saturday, May 20, surpassed last year's opening day figure by 34,088. The following day's crowd of 81,241 was greater by 28,557 than the same day in 1933.

President Roosevelt, through the medium of a motion picture shown at several points on the grounds, officially opened the Exposition. As he closed an electric switch the new lights blazed forth for the first time.

Visitors were surprised to find the Fair complete, and fully up to the promises made that it would be new.

Lights Trace Sky Ride.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, first lady of the land, inaugurated the outstanding new feature, the world's largest fountain. Like the President, she appeared in a motion picture. At a magical wave of her hand, the giant waterpours rose from the north lagoon, livened by a play of colored light.

Lighting, the most talked-of thing about the 1933 Fair, revealed wonders never approached, on the 1934 opening night. Co-ordination of lighting and color were more in evidence. Under the lights the new Century of Progress purple-red, theme color of the new Exposition, presented a glowing beauty that was different. Buildings, grouped with respect to color in light as well as color in paint, revealed a new harmony.

The Sky Ride, almost lost to vision at night formerly, greeted visitors with all its catenary system traced against the sky in electric light. Bright red neon tubes outlined the observation platforms 628 feet above the Fair. Farther south, from the rotunda of the Ford building, a pillar of blue light, 200 feet thick and more than a mile high, pierced the clouds overhead. The lighting load of this 900-foot-long building is more than one-third the total load of the entire Fair of last year.

Foreign Villages Popular.

New lights in the lagoon and a new "Aurora Borealis" of search lights at the north end of the grounds, complementing that at the south end, completed the major changes in the night time illumination.

Mecca for the opening day throngs was the new Street of Villages. The "tour of the world in a single day" offered by the fifteen reproductions of far-away lands in the new Fair proved to be an idea that "clicked."

Eleven of the foreign villages are grouped together where the Midway was in 1933. Here are an Irish village, with the atmosphere that was known by the ancient chieftains who met in Tara Hall; the Spanish village, largest ever built for any Fair; Tunisia, the "Land of the Bedouins"; the Italian village, with its leaning tower and time-worn human ruins.

Free Entertainment.

Visitors saw the Tower of London and watched Shakespeare's plays presented in a reproduction of Shakespeare's original Globe theater in the English village; saw ice-skating under the summer sun in the German Black Forest village; saw Old North Church, Mount Vernon, and the home of Paul Revere in the American Colonial village; relaxed in the luxury of a North African desert village in the Oasis; thrilled to the charm of native folk dances in the lovely Belgian village, and entered the gaiety of Montmartre in the Streets of Paris.

Elsewhere on the grounds they found a Dutch village, a Mexican village, a Swiss village and the Streets of Shanghai.

Free entertainment projects caught big crowds. Among them were the concerts on the Swift bridge, the spectacular lion and tiger show in the Standard Oil amphitheater, the circuses of the Lagoon theater, the seeming miracles performed in the Science theater and the many shows presented by exhibitors in the various exhibit buildings.

Fair Better Host.

Opening day throngs found that no exhibits remaining from last year were unchanged. Animation has been added everywhere. The Ford "exhibition," altogether new, is a world of motion, showing the manufacture of virtually every part that goes into a motor car. Armour and company and Wilson and company, packers, have done much the same with their exhibits; so have the Continental Baking company, Biram Walker, the Brook Hill dairy farm and others new to a Century of Progress.

Perhaps most important of all, visitors found the new Fair a better host. Eighty per cent of the toilets are free, transportation and restaurant prices are lower and there are more free resting places for the weary, most of them where free entertainment is in progress.

Divisions of Yugoslavia

The Kingdom of Yugoslavia—a name officially adopted by royal decree of King Alexander, signed on October 3, 1929—had its old provinces abolished in 1930. The country was then divided into nine banats, called banovinas in Serbian, and the district of Belgrade, which corresponds to the District of Columbia. With one exception, the present political divisions are named from the rivers of Yugoslavia, by the same system used in France.

CHAPTER XIV

Young Man in an Art Shop.

THE office of the small art shop just off Market street was only a cubicle of blue and silver, and the stormy conversation indignantly drifted outside—to the obvious distress of a young man who advanced warily among tapestries, prints, and objects of art, to look for chintzes for a mountain lodge.

At a window across the shop a girl with her back to salesman and customer registered something more than distress. Rebellion, her clenched fists beat out in a hot little tattoo upon the window, as a sob came audibly from the office.

"But—that wasn't the understanding!" a woman's voice protested. "I was to have a leave of absence long enough for my operation—and I come back to find my place filled! You can't do that! I have hospital bills! I was turned out of my room for unpaid rental! I have to have my job back!"

The girl at the window opened the clenched fist, threw out her hands in a final gesture of resignation, and strode doggedly to the office.

"Mr. Ward!" She spoke calmly enough. "I couldn't help overhearing. Please give Miss Treat her position again. I retire in her favor." "I happen to be the person hiring and retiring, Miss Brown. I must think of the good of the shop." "Mr. Ward," protestingly, "Miss Treat knows her stock more intimately than I do my a, b, c's. I have resigned."

"Not so fast, little one. Not long ago you came in here with a thin dime to your name. I advanced you a week's salary."

"Oh, I'm sorry!" said Miss Treat. "I didn't know."

"Don't be disturbed," wearily. "I really do not need money. I'm working here under—false pretenses. Let me have my hat, please. I'll be going."

"Then Miss Treat will be going right along with you."

"But—I can't! I've no place to go! Not even a room!"

"Go here," Miss Brown scribbled an address upon a scratch pad. "I

"Not Long Ago You Came in Here With a Thin Dime to Your Name."

won't be needing the room any longer. The rent is paid for a week. And, Miss Treat," casually, "would you consider being manager of this shop?"

"Why do you ask such an impossible question as that?"

"Come back here tomorrow noon to take that position. I assure you of it."

"But what—how—"

"Bais in belfry," explained Mr. Ward. "There has been something funny about her—but she attracts trade."

"Your services will be dispensed with at the same time, Mr. Ward. For—the good of the shop."

"Quit your kidding, girlie, and get out and sell vases."

"I'm buying the shop, Mr. Ward. Please be out of here by noon tomorrow."

"Yeah! People who live on Telegraph hill are quite given to buying expensive little art shops. Besides, it isn't for sale, you insolent little sweetie!"

"Every man has his price! I'll see the owner in the morning. I'll be going now."

"Going," ironically. "up to your suite at the Fairmont?"

"I hadn't thought. But I might go there."

She came out of the office, the daughter of the rich David Brown, looking straight before her, pride in her upturned head, a driven, beaten look in her eyes.

"Miss Brown!" cried the now distracted salesman. "If you'd just help this young man before you go! Chintzes for a mountain cabin—"

Mary turned and looked at the young man.

"Denis!" There were shock and questioning and faltering in Mary's voice.

"Ah! You know the gentleman!" the clerk beamed.

The gentleman very rigidly had removed his hat; very punctiliously was greeting Miss Brown. A detached, impersonal Denis. Where was the teasing, confident, daredevil look in his eyes? A door had banged shut on them.

Mary's back grew a little straighter. "Your chintzes—have worn out?" she inquired politely.

"The chintzes were—borrowed, if you remember."

"I was thinking," sweetly, "that they were—a sort of partnership affair."

The partner wrote fairs, Denis answered as sweetly. "I am wishing to return—"

Once before Mary Brown had seen Denis look like this; the day she tried to run from him in the storm—and he stood aside to let her go.

"Show Mr. Craig some of those pieces on the third shelf," she interrupted; and passed out of the shop.

The manager approached cockily. "If the dame is a friend of yours, I'd advise you to get out there after her. She's mad as a March hare."

The customer stared at him uncertainly. If that were true—

Mary was just entering a taxi when Denis came outside. He entered another and followed.

Surely enough, Mary's taxi went to the Fairmont. Perhaps the girl had worked here—or was looking for work here now. Still, wouldn't she have used the servants' entrance?

He asked the clerk if he might see a Miss Mary Brown.

The clerk eyed him suspiciously. "You're not—after charity?"

"What?" affrontedly.

"There are always grafters trailing them," the sparse apology.

"What name?"

Denis gave it.

you've come round to pay my bills—it won't be necessary this time. Will you sit down?"

She herself dropped into a chair by a desk, where already she had drawn out a telegram blank.

Denis stood, straight and forbidding. "If this is an intrusion, I'm sorry. I thought perhaps you were—"

Constrainedly. "Do you care to tell me what that scene in the art store meant?"

A bitter line twisted Mary's lips. Surcharged feelings burst forth in her reply.

"It meant—defeat! It meant the smashing of ideals; the thwarting of ambition; it meant that every thing I've striven toward, every thing I've accomplished in three years of earnest hopeful effort, has—gone by the board! It meant that I've—given up!"

She arose and strode about the large room in her intense way. "Oh, it isn't fair! It isn't just! I could have won out—if I could have taken my equal chance with other competitors! If my conscience hadn't cried, 'Fraud, Fraud!' But I couldn't—don't you see—"

"I don't see anything," said Denis Craig, tersely. "Why were you in that shop? Why did you hand over your job if you needed it—"

"Why?" She wheeled upon him. "For the same reason that I didn't take your job as telephone central: Fred Andrews had a new baby to finance! For the same reason I didn't go to Mill Valley for Mr. Stark; I found Don Leigh also was counting on that work. For the same reason that I didn't go up into the Hetch-Ketchy country; somebody else still is trying to repay borrowed college funds. For the same reason that I didn't take several other openings. For the same reason that I finally turned to any sort of work I could get. I actually went hungry for two days—but I didn't mind! I would do anything to make a living, to succeed on my own! And where do I get? Always it comes to this!"

"This!" Denis looked about at period furniture; a grand piano; rich hangings; deep rugs. "Am I becoming too personal if I ask you to explain the enigma of this? This paradoxical environment of the down-and-outer?—And—why the heroics?"

He still was aloof; still the stranger forced into courtesy.

Mary sat down at the desk again, and dashed off a wire. "This," holding out the sheet to Denis as she rang for a boy, "is the explanation."

Denis read the message first: "Please arrange $100,000 credit for me at Bank of Italy immediately."

Then he read the heading: David Brown. "The one I know?" he asked.

"The same."

"You must know him rather well," noting her signature, "Mary."

"Rather. He is my father."

Denis started, looked at her for a moment, then walked to a chair by the window and sat staring out at the sky line. Finally Mary spoke.

"Denis?"

He turned toward her slowly, and the smile on his face, as she had expected, was more remote than it had been.

"It takes some time to get everything in line. Of course, I suppose I was stupid not to guess. You are so essentially David Brown's daughter—in many ways. And I don't know how you could expect not to have the noblest oblige reaction which has kept you out of jobs—having been brought up by such a man. But—why the pose, Mary? Why the fraud? Why the 'line' about being a penniless young engineer out to make a fortune?"

"It wasn't a pose!" hotly. "You're just like all the others! I was sincere! I really was penniless! I gave away my money so that I could make my way on my own merit, without the pull of money behind me—"

"Something tells me," Denis doctored, "that you're the person whose million staked me."

"I am—the conscienceless nut."

He didn't back down on his earlier assertion. "Yes. You certainly were."

"Why do you say that?" tightly. "I thought you were an engineer."

"I am an engineer. Far more an engineer than a multi-millionaire's daughter."

"Your actions fail to prove it. I believe I've heard you boast that an engineer abhors waste, even that of breath. But you wasted a million. Or would have, I might have lost it! I've had plenty of mad moments over it! It's in your father's hands with full interest now, heaven be thanked! I repaid it in entirety when I floated my bond issue. And what shall you do with it? Fling it to the winds again?"

Mary's eyes flashed mutinously. "Preach! But you, who place so much value on money, had your chance! You started with a little snake, and fought your way to success!"

"Perhaps I—"

In time. But if I had had a million," demanded the visionist, "boy! wouldn't the things I have done be so much the greater?"

Mary shut her eyes—because she could see him again on the mountain top, dreaming his dream.

He looked at her quizzically. "Evidently you didn't take much to heart John Stark's lesson that had an Emersonian text? You still don't believe in utilizing natural resources?"

"And letting all the credit go to the bank roll?" she scoffed.

"Is it credit you're working for?"

"Why—why—" Mary went suddenly limp. "Of course not." It really wasn't. Only she had been very dumb not to see that that was the goal she had held up to herself. And that slogan, "No quarter!" She had asked it from the first, in shirking the responsibility of her own million!

"Then what do you care about interpretation? Progress is the thing, isn't it? Service? Achievement?"

His question, the watchword progress, brought back poignantly the evening she had saved the transit—and she turned abruptly across the room. How close he had been to her then! Now, here in her own suite with her, there was infinity between them!

"And what would you do with a million dollars, may I ask," she managed to make her voice impersonal. "If you were an engineer?"

He screwed up his face into the thoughtful lines she loved. "What—"

Suddenly he leaped to his feet. His face lighted, his eyes seemed alive. Enthusiasm made his voice vibrant and blaring. He was seized with an idea—and everything else was forgotten.

"What would I do? Why, I have it, Mary! I have it!"

"Tell me!" eagerly. This, this thawed-out creature was more like Denis!

"I'd take it to John Stark, of course, to start his engineering firm with my capital, his experience. And, if I were a young engineer like Mary Brown, looking for an opening to success, I'd go into his department of design—"

"Denis! Denis!" Lifting rushed into Mary's voice, too. "That's it! That's it! Oh, Denis, you're a—"

A look silenced her. Why, she might say he was an angel, a sweet thing, even a darling! She had been known to make those extravagant assertions. No such nonsense now, said the forbidding look on his face.

"I'm a promoter," said his voice. "Yes, of course." For just a moment Mary felt stepped upon. Then her exuberance returned. "And it takes a good promoter—to promote some other person's dreams! Come," snatching up her bag. "Let's go to Mr. Stark's office!"

She was being a little mad with Denis again! Then it came to her that they were leaving this isolation. But Denis wouldn't leave without telling her why he had ostracized her, would he?

Denis would. He was opening the door.

MECHANIC FALLS TAKES BETHEL, 4-3

Errors Mar Pitching Duel Between Paul Browne-Quimby and Quinn-Hobert

Mechanic Falls came to town last Sunday and went home with a 4-3 victory after they were helped by costly errors and two decisions by the umpire on bases. The pitching of Browne and Quimby was above par as also was that of Quinn and Hobert. It was a pitchers' battle from start to finish with errors making the scores. Humphries, who garnered three of the six hits gotten by Mechanic Falls was the big stick of the day, while Goddard, Hood and P. Browne were the only Bethel men able to locate the offerings of Quinn and Hobert.

Mechanic Falls opened the scoring in the first inning on a bouncer off the plate and a single by Humphries. Bethel immediately evened the score by a base on balls to Goddard, a stolen base, a bunt by Quimby, and a beautiful hook slide at home by Goddard. The second inning was scoreless. In the third Bailey got on by an error, Humphries brought him home with a two-base hit, the only one of the day, then Humphries scored on an error, making the score 3 to 1 in Mechanic Falls' favor. Bethel evened the score in the fifth on a hit by "Bud" Browne, a sacrifice by Goddard, and errors by the shortstop and pitcher allowed Browne and Quimby to score. Mechanic Falls scored again in the sixth on a hit by Fifeild and errors by Austin and Swan. This ended the scoring for the day. Allen brought the crowd to their feet in the seventh with a beautiful one-handed catch of Raymond's hot one.

The Earth's Corona

The earth has a corona, a luminous, glowing, gaseous envelope extending far into space, according to a professor of the University of Oslo, Norway. Spectroscopic studies indicate that the glow is mostly due to electrically excited nitrogen gas, which apparently exists at considerable density, even at heights as great as 550 miles above the surface of the earth. He found that the earth's corona is decidedly eccentric. It is far more extensive on the side nearest the sun than it is anywhere else and shows some marked differences from that of the sun. The sun's corona, as far as scientists know, is generated by the sun's own power, while the earth's is a product of the action of the sun on gases in the earth's outer atmosphere.
